Long Point Region Conservation Authority – Planning & Permitting Services Continue to be Available

Long Point Region Conservation Authority’s Planning & Permitting Department is working remotely, providing service and support by phone and through email.

Health and safety is at the forefront of all of LPRCA’s work. In accordance with the provincial stay-at-home order and expert health advice, LPRCA staff in all departments are working remotely wherever possible with stringent safety protocols in place for essential work that cannot be done remotely.

The Planning & Permitting department is working remotely at full capacity, continuing to accept and review development applications and issue permits. While the province has designated only certain construction work essential, the planning and permitting process can continue for all projects, helping ensure permits are issued in an efficient and timely manner.

Submit planning applications and inquiries, by email, to planning@lprca.on.ca.

For information on planning and permits, including fees, forms and interactive mapping tools, visit the Planning & Permits section of the LPRCA website. The LPRCA Administration Office can be contacted by phone at 519-842-4242.
